KANSAS HOSPITALS have a direct economic impact comprised of employment and wages paid to hospital workers. This direct impact creates secondary impacts on the economy through the ‘ripple’ effect of businesses purchasing goods and services from other local businesses and through health care workers spending wages and other income for household goods and services.

The Kansas health care sector, directly and indirectly, contributes almost 338,000 jobs and nearly $24 billion in labor income to the Kansas economy.

Hospitals comprise the largest industry within the health care sector with direct employment of over 76,000 Kansans and direct labor income of almost $7 billion.

Every 100 hospital jobs support an additional 74 jobs in non-health care sectors.

Every $1,000 in current hospital wages and salaries sustains an additional $475 in income for employees of grocery stores, restaurants, gas and electric utilities and other industries used by hospitals and their employees.

A vigorous and sustainable health care system is essential not only for the health and welfare of community residents but also to enhance economic opportunity in Kansas.

Health-related sectors are some of the fastest growing in the economy. Given demographic trends, this growth is likely to continue.

Evidence shows quality health care improves worker productivity, aids in the recruitment and retention of businesses and attracts and retains retirees.

Hospitals generate almost $305 million in sales tax, primarily through employee spending, which is used to fund state programs.

State and local governments garner over $2 billion in annual tax revenues from health care sector activities.

The economic benefit of KANSAS HOSPITALS on local and state economies is significant. To continue to attract jobs and maintain families in Kansas, it is critical that the state have high-quality health care providers and services.

We urge our legislators, members of Congress, and community leaders to recognize Kansas hospitals are instrumental to supporting state and local economies.

Steps must be taken to continue investing in our state’s health care system.
